

in a nutshell

THE STRAITS TIMES

Methane levels climb dangerously but pinpoint sources yet found

CLIMATE CENTRAL

Canada rolls out inaugural national Carbon price in bid to meet Paris Agreement target

PRI

Temporal snapshots of shrinking Indonesian forests

CLIMATE

ENVIRONMENTAL CONSERVATION

IJSTOR DAILY

Can Wildlife Corridors really rebuild the lost connections?

YAHOO SG

US stepping up wind energy but putting eagles' population at risk

THE GUARDIAN

Cancun Summit attempts to safeguard biodiversity and genetic information in bioengineering

THE STRAITS TIMES

Alternative seafood options proposed in bid to steer Singaporeans away from rapidly-declining species

THE STRAITS TIMES

Sustainability efforts, paradoxes and controversies to expand into 2017

S'PORE

GREEN IDEAS

BBC

Nature LifeHack: fog as a source of water in rural Lima

DAILYMAIL

New lead in geo-engineering using reactive aerosols to combat ozone damage

THE GUARDIAN

Can the dream of modern living in the wild ever come true with the help of solar-power?

CHANNEL NEWS ASIA

66 year-old albatross laid her 41st egg, living up to the title as the oldest breeding bird in the wild

YOUTUBE

Unexpected beauty of a flood - Ayers Rock turns into a waterfall

LIGHTER NOTES

RIGHT HERE RIGHT NOW

OES

OES is hosting the NEA Youth Partners Appreciation & Networking 2017 session on 20th Jan, 4-6pm. Details & sign-up here!

BES DRONGOS

Semester 2 MacRitchie walk dates are out! More info + sign up here for guided tours along the Petai Trail

One noteworthy observation from last month's environmental news headlines is the different roles of people in its interaction with nature - not just people as a unified actor in global changes today, but people in different capacities, with different bargaining powers, and perhaps, people as unknowing recipients of the effects of complex environmental changes.

MONGABAY

Window of rapid pathogen proliferation possibly exists en-route to urbanization

THE HUFFINGTON POST

Oil pipeline under Lake Oahe suspended amid protests by indigenous communities, industry proponents undeterred

CHANNEL NEWSASIA

Native communities key to protecting forests and biodiversity, but better leadership required

SPECIAL: PEOPLE x ENVIRONMENT