

RealSport Media are looking for sports journalism students to intern remotely for the company on a rolling basis. Candidates can write for the site as much or as little as they please depending on their commitment. There will be room for growth within the company for the right candidates after being assessed on several factors by our team of full-time editors.

Qualifications / Role Description

- We are looking for journalism students who are passionate about sports and who would like to pursue a career in sports journalism.
- The role will include contributing articles to our website about various sports. Articles can either be news, opinion based and/or analysis pieces.
- The desired sports include but are not limited to: American Football (NFL and NCAAF), MLB, NHL, basketball (NBA and NCAAB), Soccer (League and International), UFC/MMA, Wrestling, Tennis, Golf, Rugby, eSports.

What we offer

- RealSport is an accredited sporting news website featuring on both Google News and Newsnow.
- This opportunity will offer the candidate the ability to build their writing portfolio along with adding our accredited news site to their resume. Each writer's profile on the site will also allow them to track their total readership in real-time and see how many eyes are getting on their work.
- Our website is currently getting 500k unique monthly users and growing as the site expands. We offer the chance for our contributors to get their sporting voice/opinion out to our global user base while building a name for themselves in the sporting journalism world.
- This is an unpaid role but for the right candidates there is room for growth within the company which will become a remunerated position.

How to Proceed

If interested, please contact kyle@realsport101.com for more information.