This is an amazing, action-packed program! Students take two courses (for PSYC or ENVT credit) examining the psychological, political, and environmental after-effects of periods of violence, turmoil, and conflict. You will witness first-hand the socio-cultural and environmental footprints left behind by violence and sustained poverty in developing countries. Through this program you will explore the pros and cons of international intervention and humanitarian aid, meeting and volunteering with organizations working to improve social, political, and environmental conditions (for both humans and other living species - including elephants!) on the ground.

Students take the following courses:
PSYC 315/410: Emerging from Violence: Trauma and Post Traumatic Growth
ENVT352: Psychology of Social Change

Mid-May - June, 2021 | $4,950* *(subject to change & does not include tuition)

My summer study abroad trip to Cambodia and Vietnam was the most eye-opening experience of my life with some of the most incredible people I’ve ever met! Everything I thought I knew about the world was turned upside down as I entered a culture different from one I had ever known, and dove in deep by speaking with people and learning about their lives. Our professors challenged and supported us so well in our classes, research, and day-to-day life, and all of us formed a bond I could never have imagined through the experiences we had together. I cannot say enough about how much I gained from my study abroad experiences— if you’re questioning whether or not you should go somewhere totally out of your comfort zone, the answer is YES. - Ashley L, Summer 2019
