

THE DEPARTMENT OF CLASSICS
THEODORE B. GUÉRARD LECTURE SERIES

Diversifying Classics

This colloquium focuses upon the ways in which Classics opens a window into a diverse and multicultural world, and how this diversity allows for a variety of methodological approaches and applications for cross-comparative cultural study. Discussion also turns to the structural elements that historically have constrained these approaches, and a wider discussion on how to move the discipline (and the perception of the discipline) forward into a redefinition of Classics for the 21st century.

Thursday, February 28, 2019

“‘Western Civilization’ and the Whitewashing of the Multiethnic Ancient Mediterranean”

Dr. Rebecca Futo Kennedy (Denison University) | 4:00 p.m., Alumni Center (SOEHHP)

“Multicultural Voices in Classical Scholarship”

Dr. Arum Park (University of Arizona) | 5:15 p.m., Alumni Center (SOEHHP)

Friday, March 1, 2019

“From ‘Western Civ’ to Global Citizenship: How Ancient Rome Can Help Us Rethink Diversity”

Dr. Nandini Pandey (University of Wisconsin) | 4:00 p.m., Alumni Center (SOEHHP)

“Sustaining Classics into the 21st Century”

Dr. James Newhard (College of Charleston) | 5:15 p.m.

Co-sponsors: School of Languages, Cultures, and World Affairs; Office of Institutional Diversity; Sustainability Literacy Institute; Avery Research Center for African American History and Culture; Department of History; African American Studies Program; Classics Club; Eta Sigma Phi.

Contact: Dr. James Newhard (newhardj@cofc.edu)

Dr. Samuel Flores (floresso@cofc.edu)

FREE and OPEN to the PUBLIC

