We are pleased to announce that we are now accepting paper and panel proposals for the XXIII North American James Joyce Conference, co-hosted by the College of Charleston and the University of South Carolina, 11-15 June 2013, in Charleston, South Carolina.

We are not promoting a particular theme for the Charleston Conference, or to give this a positive spin, let us say that ours will be the “allincluding most farraginous” Joyce conference. So whatever topic you would like to entertain will probably meet our criterion. Please plan to join us!

You should email your proposals to the Academic Program Coordinator for the Conference, Tom Rice:

ricet@mailbox.sc.edu or tomrice@sc.edu

Paper proposals should include:

- Title
- Author and affiliation
- Brief abstract (c. 250 words)
- Technology request

Panel proposals should contain the same information for all participants.

Our working deadline for your proposal is 15 March 2013.

Our conference website is under construction at <http://blogs.cofc.edu/jamesjoyce/> and will be updated through the coming months.

In the meantime, take note that The Francis Marion Hotel will be the conference hotel, and most meetings will take place across the street at the College of Charleston. Reservations at the conference rate will be open from 1 October 2012 and close on 26 April 2013: (843) 722-0600 or (877) 756-2121.

Conferees might be interested to know the Spoleto Festival USA, an international comprehensive festival of the arts, will run from 24 May-9 June.

Those of you interested in beach rentals for the week should contact agencies representing the following beaches, all a convenient commute to downtown Charleston and the conference: Folly Beach, Isle of the Palms, Kiawah Island, and Sullivan’s Island.
