

The Global Cybercrime Threat: And How One Successful Criminal Prosecution Brought a Few International Cybercriminals to Justice

JOIN US!! As the Criminal Justice Institute, Criminal Justice Society, and Technology Encryption and Cyber Law Society welcome Pace alumni John Bandler.

John Bandler, Pace Law Class of 2002, runs a legal and consulting practice where he assists individuals and corporations with cybersecurity and investigations. He served as a prosecutor at the New York County District Attorney's Office for 13 years, investigating and prosecuting a wide range of crimes from cybercrime, digital currency money laundering, identity theft, and violent street crime. Prior to that he was a Trooper in the New York State Police for eight years, serving in one of the states busiest stations. He is licensed to practice law in NY, CT, and DC, and holds various certifications in information security, information technology, privacy, anti-money laundering, and fraud investigation.

John Bandler will speak of a groundbreaking investigation that started with a report of credit card fraud and eventually uncovered the global cybercrime industry with participants from New York to California to Ukraine and Russia. Mr. Bandler's presentation will touch upon many aspects of the case that will interest many of you, such as:

- ▶ The various phases of a complex international Cybercrime case
- ▶ Conducting a criminal investigation across national boundaries
- ▶ Presenting digital evidence, voluminous evidence, and traditional evidence
- ▶ The ancillary legal issues that arose,
