MESSAGE from the Superintendent

Dear Community Members,

In the South Orangetown Central School District, we understand that the future of our nation, and indeed our world, depends upon our ability to develop leadership skills in our students. We believe, as famously stated by Vince Lombardi, that “leaders are made, not born...They are made by hard effort, which is the price which all of us must pay to achieve any goal that is worthwhile.” All SOCSD students are encouraged to be citizens of strong character, to think creatively about solutions to real-world problems and to commit to meaningful projects that make our community better.

From the moment they enter kindergarten through high school graduation, our students are introduced to the values and attributes that shape their character as future leaders. We are increasingly focused on both intellectual and social emotional development, and provide opportunities for students to practice leadership skills through participation in our many honor societies, clubs and athletics teams.

Sometimes, students quietly distinguish themselves through exemplary leadership. Our Board of Education recently recognized 16 SOMS New York Jets Upstanders who exhibit courage and compassion through their commitment to “Stomp Out Bullying”—just one example of our students contributing to a better world.

Please join us in supporting and celebrating all of our students’ efforts to grow as leaders, to strive for greatness and to make our community an inspiring place to live, work and learn.

Sincerely,

Robert R. Pritchard, Ed.D.
Superintendent of Schools

Educating Engaged, Informed Global Citizens

Over the past few years, SOCSD has invested in intensive curriculum and professional development to ensure that students district-wide have the knowledge and skills to be successful in a competitive global economy.

Evidence-based instruction practices emphasize hands-on, problem-based learning to solve real world challenges: From kindergarten through Grade 12, students build and apply content knowledge as well as creativity, critical thinking, communication and collaboration skills.

The highly-anticipated annual SOCSD School Maker Faire (pictured, right) provides students with the opportunity to present and discuss their work with an authentic audience. Last year, more than 400 students shared their science, technology, engineering, art and math projects with hundreds of parents, staff and community members.

A focus on developing emotional intelligence among students, staff and families: We are working to create a healthier, more compassionate school community through efforts including the Yale Center for Emotional Intelligence RULER approach to promote social emotional learning. Our administrative team and faculty members have been engaged in professional development and building-level initiatives to support positive behaviors, self-regulation and stress management.

On January 16, more than 100 WOS and CLE families participated in the first-ever Family Mindfulness Night (pictured above). The event offered parents an insider’s view of the work happening in their children’s schools every day, where school psychologists lead mindfulness exercises, physical education teachers lead yoga instruction and teachers use Brain Gym® PACE strategies in their classrooms.

Cultivating engaged and informed global citizens: SOCSD students are invested in making a difference in their school and local community through dozens of service and outreach activities. It is equally important that students are prepared to engage in the world beyond our neighborhoods, whether by having the opportunity to hear the youngest Nobel Peace Prize winner talk about advocating for girls education or partnering with virtual classmates in Barcelona to brainstorm solutions to problems we face at home.

In November, SOMS Debate Club members (pictured above) presented bills they had drafted on tobacco use/vaping, secondary school start times and expanded 911 access at the New York State YMCA Youth and Government Conference in Albany. Delegates debated bills with more than 200 peers on the Senate and Assembly floors, toured the State Capitol and met with government officials.

STRENGTHENING PARTNERSHIPS

Making bold moves requires strong community support. SOCSD is exploring new ways to enhance connections among school, home and community so that all students achieve to their fullest potential.

Expanding supports for K-12 families: Since joining the district in November, Family Engagement Center (FEC) Coordinator AJ Walker has been developing resources and opportunities for SOCSD families. The FEC is hosting the Parent Safety Workshop series and providing 1:1 support for creating family emergency plans, collaborating with faculty on curriculum-aligned workshops, organizing a spring alumni panel to share college advice with high school students, and much more. Ms. Walker (pictured above left, with local business owner Fara Abramson) is also building community partnerships to support the FEC.

Promoting mentorship experiences: From guest speakers who bring lessons to life to community-based internships for high school seniors, our schools help students identify and explore their interests by engaging with local experts. On January 5, the TZHS FIRST Robotics Competition team, SO BOTZ, kicked off the 2019 competition season with Board of Education members Christine Lee and Lonnie Jacobs, and 17 engineers, technologists and business professionals who volunteered to spend the day brainstorming robot design and game strategy with students (pictured above right).

Making it easier to engage: SOCSD is working to meet the changing needs of our diverse community by making it easier for families and community members to access information and get involved. In addition to highlighting student and staff achievements and program news in the weekly e-News, we launched the Wednesday Update e-blast last year in collaboration with our PTAs and TZ Red & White to share information and volunteer opportunities. The Wednesday Update, among other school and district electronic communications, is produced in both English and Spanish. To better reach those who don’t use or have access to social media, email or the internet, we have increased our publications from an annual budget notice to production of a quarterly school newsletter. We are also creating opportunities to connect with families and our community in person through a growing number of Family Nights and parent workshops held throughout the school year!

Restructuring Learning Time and Spaces

To support evidence-based instructional innovation and the changing needs of students, SOCSD is adjusting where and when learning happens.

Exploring alternative approaches to scheduling: Since May 2018, a team of TZHS administrators, faculty, students and parents has been examining master scheduling options. “It’s been an opportunity to take a collective look at what we are offering, how that affects student outcomes and how we might improve,” says Principal Dr. Jennifer Amos.

TZHS Master Scheduling Inquiry Team members (pictured right) recently visited four local high schools with different approaches to scheduling to learn how their master schedules impact student choice, stress level and achievement; faculty instructional practices, collaboration and culture; and, facilities, food service and staffing requirements. The team aims to have a recommendation to present this spring.
