Snow Day (11+ years) Daniel was sitting in class waiting for the final bell so he could go home. Today had not been a good day. They had testing all morning and then it was too cold to go outside to run around at lunch time. But just before the end of the day, his luck changed. His teacher said, “I have an important announcement. The weather report says there is a snow storm coming tonight, they say it might be a blizzard. If it turns into a blizzard we might have a snow day tomorrow.” This made the kids so happy, they were high fiving each other and yelling “Snow Day!” Even the teacher had a big smile on her face. The only student who just sat there with a puzzled look on his face was Daniel’s new friend, Mateo, who had just moved to New York from sunny Florida. Daniel went over to Mateo to tell him the good news. 1. Why had today not been a good day for Daniel? (testing all morning; too cold to go outside) _____	Questions 2.
