EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

Thanks to “reshoring” activities, U.S. economic prospects are picking up. Growth is slowly gaining momentum and various economic and political conditions in the short term are improving for U.S. manufacturers. Recently, many U.S. companies discovered that offshore location-based advantages have disappeared. This paper reviews the current trend in reshoring and identifies factors contributing to the U.S. manufacturing renaissance.

Keywords: Manufacturing, Reshoring, U.S. Economy, Competitiveness, Made in America