

my rubric

HONESTY

right morals & ethics

lack of secrecy

presence of trust

FREEDOM

flexibility

individual rights

emotional & physical space

GENEROSITY

kindness

helpful

spreading positivity

UNITY

bonding

cohesion

strength

GROWTH

supporting uplifting

not giving up

LOVE

- affection
- interest & pleasure
- inspiring

RESPECT

- admiration
- idolize
- worship

SUSTAINABILITY

- showing concern
- understanding necessity
- taking initiative

GRATITUDE

- appreciation
- empathy
- being thankful for everything

AMBITION

- courage
- fearless
- hard-work & dedication

My rubric takes the form of a checklist with three important aspects of each value mentioned underneath the respective values. I'm a very organized and meticulous girl whose life functions on reminders and to-do lists. Therefore, having a checklist format for my rubric seemed like the most efficient way for me to be connected to this part of the assignment. I basically jotted down the three most crucial branches of each value according to my understanding and then designed them in the aforementioned layout. For assessment purposes, I can use this rubric as a way of checking whether a particular area of my life has the necessary aspects of a value or not. If not, it will help me clearly analyze what is missing.

If I had to point out any flaws in my rubric, it would be the personalization of it. What my upbringing and experiences have taught me, may not be the same for others. My "important features" may not match someone else's. It's doubtful that my rubric could work for another person with as much effectiveness.

I tried using my rubric by aligning it with a few important relationships in my lives and noticed how helpful it was. Even though these relationships have been a part of my life for years, I had never put so much thought into what is working and what isn't. My rubric presented all of it to me as I filled it in.