

Suzanne Singer

Title: Data Challenges in an Energy Transition

Abstract: Data management and analysis can be challenging for communities working toward a transition towards renewable energy sources. Data collection for energy needs is complicated and requires unique approaches for several reasons, including performing analysis with incomplete data, attaining reliable information, and securely sharing information with stakeholders. This talk will provide examples of these data challenges in a Native American community building their renewable energy capacity.