The Context of I Saw Three Ships & The Holly and the Ivy

By Dick Marcus

Our Christmas songs range from traditional religious melodies such as O Holy Night to more secular holiday tunes such as Jim Franklin's mash up of Jingle Bells and Over the River. Most are easily understood, but we have two songs this year that seem oddly unconnected to traditional Christmas stories that seem to have hidden metaphors built into them. That makes them intriguing to consider.

In, "I Saw Three Ships," the question is what ships? I don't recall ships in the stories of the birth of Jesus, do you? Is it a metaphor for Jesus, Mary, and Joseph? Do they somehow represent to the doctrine of the trinity? Maybe they suggest the three wise men?

In 1975, I spent the summer in Cologne (Köln), Germany. According to the local lore, the mumified bodies (or some others say just the skulls) of the the Three Wise Men were found in the Holy Lands and brought to Constantinople, by Constantine's mother Helena in the 300's. Much later they were taken to Milan, Italy, which still holds huge celebrations on Epiphany (also called Twelfth Night, or January 6th). But we do know that in 1164, the Holy Roman Emperor Frederick brought the reliquary holding what is said to be the remains from Milan to Cologne, Germany. Ships sailed up the Rhine River bringing the relics to Cologne.

So, when I sing this song, I think of the Three Wise Men, not so much their skulls coming to Cologne, but sailing in on their magnificent camels to present their gifts.

In the "The Holly and the Ivy," (earliest version found in 1710) perhaps you have puzzled over why the carol pairs two seemingly unrelated evergreen plants that is almost entirely about the holly and not much at all about the ivy.

At rehearsal recently, we were told of a tradition of the ivy stands for the feminine and the holly for the masculine. This is correct and it comes from a much older song called: "The Contest of the Holly and the Ivy" (1561). This tune discusses the rivalry between men and women, thinly disguised as a contest. To 21st century people, that contest song is thoroughly sexist as the holly is strong in attracting many birds, whereas the ivy is seen as sickly. Also, "The Contest" has nothing to do with Christmas at all. Holly was conceived of as being masculine in the plant symbology of the time, probably because it is more rigid and prickly, whereas the softer ivy is associated with the feminine in this tradition.

REFRAIN: Nay, Ivy, nay, it shall not be, I wis, (wis = assuredly)
Let Holly have the mastery as the manner is.

1. Holly standeth in the hall fair to behold,
Ivy stands without the door; she is full sore a cold. REFRAIN

2. Holly and his merry men, they dancen and they sing;
Ivy and her maidens, they weepen and they wring. REFRAIN

With the symbols of holly and ivy already well known in England, it is not surprising that they become "borrowed" for religious purposes. Holly's white flowers, red berries, prickly nature, and bitter taste are mentioned. Holly's attributes hardly need exegesis. Holly's "white as lily" flower is an allusion to purity. The association is made between the red color of holly's berry and Christ's blood. The holly's thorny "prickle" refers to the "crown of thorns." The bitter taste of holly's bark is an allusion to the drink offered Christ as he hung on the cross. The song concentrates almost entirely on the holly. Indeed, King Henry VIII wrote a love song Green Groweth the Holly which talks about holly and ivy resisting winter blasts and not changing their green hue, but only holly gets top billing in the title.

Our version of the song became quite popular due to the 1952 black and white melodrama movie from Britain starring Ralph Richardson, The Holly and the Ivy (If you wish, click <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=sJbWG32SRXE> for a YouTube of the first 10 minutes of the movie.)

Performance at Ronald McDonald House Charities by Jake Umhoefer

On the calendars for several months we have had an appearance planned at Ronald McDonald House Charities. This was a part of the negotiations with helping them monetarily based on ticket sales as well. Since this was purposely planned on a Monday night so that none of you would have to spend time away from family other than your normal rehearsal night.

RONALD McDONALD
HOUSE CHARITIES

Please watch for communications from Randy or me with details like call time, parking instructions, where to meet, what to wear, etc. All that will be handled soon. For now, save this address so you know where to go for the event: 8948 Watertown Plank Rd - Wauwatosa, Wisconsin 53226.

Final Restaurant Updates for 2014 by Jake Umhoefer

Monday, December 15 after our appearance at Ronald McDonald House Charities we go to TGI Fridays. Since it is our normal rehearsal night I hope attendance at our final official restaurant dining night of the year will be a big one.

Invite your families, friends, and anyone else to join us for our gathering. This final one will be the BIGGEST potential kickback ever with 25% of BOTH food AND drink sales.

Our efforts at Chili's so far have not been in vain.

After my Sunday night email I received a response that a large family recently dined this weekend and our current Chili's status is just shy of $300 so far.

This still means we have about $200 to go – so please do not relax just yet! I encourage all of you to try to go once more in the month of December to help make our requirement of $500. Remember, if the $500 is not met we will not gain any monetary value for our efforts.

MVE Calendar Raffle by Jake Umhoefer

HOW DOES IT WORK?

- Each drawn name gets thrown back into the respective hats after the first show in case they attend one show but not the other.
- A ticket is not transferable – the name on the ticket pulled must be in the audience and not a stand in for that person.
