Afternoon Bear Tracks: A story in pictures. Our small group has slowly grown in size and connections. Learning opportunities allow for...
Social development helps your child get along with others. By playing and learning together, children build their social skills, language skills, and self-control. Emotional development lets your child understand his feelings and the feelings of others. To build your child's self-esteem, we encourage each individual, to try new things and keep working at hard tasks. Language and literacy development helps your child understand and communicate through listening, talking, reading, and writing. These skills are all connected. Teachers help your child use her growing communication skills to learn new concepts. Thinking, or cognitive, skills develop as children learn to think more complexly, make decisions, and solve problems. As young children explore, ask questions, and create, they improve their thinking skills. Speaking and listening (language). Your preschooler's language skills develop when she has lots of opportunities to listen to and speak with others.

Thank you for sharing your preschooler with us at WUNS!
