MARCH’S TOPIC:
ANIMAL HOMES

• Just like us, wild animals need a place to go when they are tired, cold or scared. Wild animals are capable of building a house or finding just the right place to live.

• Most birds build nests. The size, location and materials used depend upon the type of bird.

• Many animals use old dead trees for their homes. Woodpeckers, squirrels, opossums, and raccoons are just a few.

• Moles, groundhogs, worms and many others live underground.

• The beaver builds its home, or lodge, in the middle of the water using sticks and mud. The entrance to the lodge is underwater.

• Of course, some animals like the turtles carry their house wherever they go. Isn’t that convenient?

Book Suggestions: Whose Nest, by Guy Troughton and A House for Hermit Crab, by Eric Carle