

The Good, The Bad, & The Hungry

Managing Wildlife Conflict Around the Home

Wildlife on your property can provide hours of enjoyment through hunting, birdwatching, and other activities, but they can also cause problems around the home. Deer browsing on landscape plants, rabbits munching on gardens, moles tearing up yards, and groundhogs denning under buildings are just a few of the common complaints from homeowners throughout Ohio.

Join us for an evening program that will teach you how to identify wildlife damage, employ preventative measures, and manage current damage. We will cover a variety of species included the ones mentioned above, but also voles, raccoons, skunks, squirrels, coyotes, bats, and black vultures.

This FREE program is brought to you by OSU Extension and the Scioto SWCD.
