TEXTBOOKS
There is no textbook for this course. Readings are primarily e-journal articles that can be retrieved from OSU Libraries’ online catalog. First, go to Ohio State University Libraries <library.osu.edu>, and under "Links" on the right-hand menu, select “Online Journals List” and find the relevant e-journal title. Other readings are articles and book chapters that will be scanned to PDF format by Electronic Reserves, and will be available for downloading from Carmen.osu.edu under the current course. Additional readings, especially those selected by students in the class, will be made available during the course.
Thompson (Main) Library Reserve and Electronic Reserves:
Some reference books will be placed in Closed Reserve at Thompson (Main) Library (loan periods may vary) during the semester. (Note: Reserved materials in Closed Reserve are for the specified semester only.)

COURSE DESCRIPTION
This course investigates the linguistic structures of major Chinese dialects from a cross-dialectal, comparative approach. Also covered are issues pertaining to individual dialects as well as dialect classification and various socio-cultural aspects of linguistic differences, such as multilingualism, language planning, attitudes and attitude changes, etc. Other topics — such as vernacular writing (containing vernacular characters), language and media, language and local / popular culture, language and ethnic identity, language and gender, and so forth — will also be explored subject to class interest.

COURSE OBJECTIVES & EXPECTED OUTCOMES
The course aims to provide students with opportunities to explore and examine — through assigned readings (including some classic articles) and student-selected ones — dialect data with respect to linguistic structures and other linguistic topics of interest in the study of Chinese dialects. While the focus is on modern Chinese dialects, historical background may also be provided for a better understanding of synchronic issues.

Students should, at the end of the course, gain a deeper understanding of both the linguistic structure of some modern Chinese dialects and the relationship between the standard language and the dialects of Chinese in Chinese culture and society. The course should provide the student with sufficient knowledge to examine some of the topics at an advanced graduate level and to proceed to further studies in a graduate seminar concerning Chinese dialects.

COURSE CONTENT
The course will be conducted through lectures and discussion of class readings led by the instructor and by students. Sound files, video / film clips, and other multimedia materials may also be presented in class for analysis and discussion. Guest speakers may be invited to speak on OSU resources on Chinese dialects, their native Chinese dialect, etc. In-class assignments include analyses of cross-dialect comparisons of linguistic phenomena (tones, segments, lexical items, syntactic patterns, etc.) Individual assignments consist of each student presenting, and leading, the discussion of two readings (to be selected by the student in consultation with the instructor), plus a presentation to introduce the class to some linguistic features of a Chinese dialect of their choice. Students will also present their final project in class and submit the written version at the end of the semester.

STUDENT RESPONSIBILITIES
Students are expected to:

1. Read the assigned readings prior to class. Be prepared with questions and comments for class discussion of the readings.
2. Attend class regularly, and participate actively in class discussions and other class activities.
3. Present two readings for class discussion. These may be based on the reading list supplied by the instructor and/or other articles and book chapters selected by students with instructor approval.
Prepare the outlines for the readings, which form an integral part of the presentation. Upload to carmen.osu.edu the evening before the class presentation.

4. Present a linguistic description of some aspect a Chinese dialect. The variety of Chinese may be that of the student's own native dialect, or a dialect based on data collected from the student's significant other, a relative, room-mate, friend, neighbor, etc.). Compile a small set of useful references (and online resources, if available) for students in the class to learn more about the dialect. Students may prepare other materials (e.g., sound files or other multimedia materials) to accompany the class presentation.

5. For the term paper project:
   o Choose a topic that deals with only one (sub-)variety of a Chinese dialect, or conduct a cross-dialectal comparison (of two or more dialects) on some particular issue or phenomenon. The study should be based on data that the student has collected based on his/her own field work, and/or chosen from existing audio files (with or without transcriptions), video files, etc.
   o Turn in a one-page, double-spaced, hardcopy of the term paper proposal, plus select references, in Week 11. Submit a corresponding digital copy to the Dropbox in Carmen.osu.edu.
   o Present an oral version of some interesting findings from the research project at the end of the semester.
   o Submit a written version of the final project — about 15 double-spaced pages, including examples and references — in hardcopy and digital format at the end of the semester. Include textual data, sound files, and/or multimedia materials as needed.

6. All course assignments in digital format that are text-based are to be uploaded to your Dropbox in Carmen.osu.edu. Multimedia (audio and/or video files may be submitted to OSU’s Buckeye.box.

DISABILITY SERVICES

Students with disabilities that have been certified by the Office for Disability Services will be appropriately accommodated, and should inform the instructor as soon as possible of their needs. The Office for Disability Services is located in 150 Pomerene Hall, 1760 Neil Avenue (Tel: 292.3307. TDD: 292.0901)

ACADEMIC INTEGRITY (ACADEMIC MISCONDUCT)

Academic integrity is essential to maintaining an environment that fosters excellence in teaching, research, and other educational and scholarly activities. Failure to follow the rules and guidelines established in OSU’s Code of Student Conduct (revised 7 December 2007) may constitute “Academic Misconduct.” OSU’s Code of Student Conduct (section 3335-23-04 Prohibited conduct) defines as academic misconduct “[a]ny activity that tends to compromise the academic integrity of the university, or subvert the educational process.”

Examples of academic misconduct include (but are not limited to) plagiarism, collusion (unauthorized collaboration), copying the work of another student, possession of unauthorized materials during an examination, and submission of the same work for credit in two (or more) courses. Ignorance of the University's Code of Student Conduct is never considered an “excuse” for academic misconduct; hence, be sure to review the sections dealing with academic misconduct in the Code of Student Conduct.

Be sure also to read the University's Ten Suggestions for Preserving Academic Integrity and/or the Eight Cardinal Rules of Academic Integrity (from Northwestern U.). The University's policy on academic misconduct will be enforced in accordance with Faculty Rule 3335-5-54, and all alleged cases of academic misconduct will be reported to the Office of Academic Affairs' Committee on Academic Misconduct (COAM) for resolution. In addition, graduate students should be familiar with the Graduate School's Graduate Student Code of Research and Scholarly Conduct, which is included in the Graduate School Handbook. (PDF file). Students with questions concerning the University's policies or questions concerning academic or research misconduct are encouraged to ask the instructor any time during the semester.

[Note: OSU’s Center for the Study of Teaching and Writing (CSTW) provides a definition of plagiarism together with Basic Citation Rules and Examples, including use of direct quotes versus paraphrasing, etc. Also, OSU Libraries’ Knowledge Bank has a set of short, online videos on Academic Misconduct and Plagiarism.]

Readings will be finalized after students in the class have made the selection of their readings for presentation. The topic headings for the class days will be adjusted as needed. Below is a list of potential readings based on the preliminary syllabus.

Instructions for retrieving e-journal articles: E-journal articles can be accessed from Ohio State University Libraries <library.osu.edu>. Under "Links" on the right-hand menu, select “Online Journals List” and find the relevant e-journal title. Other readings, scanned to PDF format by Electronic Reserves, will be available for downloading from Carmen.osu.edu under the current course. Additional readings will be made available during the course.

Off-campuser users: When you go to the OSU Libraries home page, on the right side of the screen, click on the "Off Campus Sign-In" link. Enter your name and your OSU password. You will then be returned to the library home page.

Back to the right side of the screen, click on "Online Journals List”. In the search box, enter the name of your journal (e.g., Language in Society).

Center for the Study and Teaching of Writing (CSTW). Excellent resources, "handouts", tutorials, etc., to assist undergraduate students — and those for whom English is a second (or third) foreign language — in their research and writing. The Center also provides a web page on plagiarism, giving a definition of plagiarism, together with a set of Basic Citation Rules and Examples, including use of direct quotes versus paraphrasing, etc. To cite books for this course, one recommendation is to use the sciences style for bibliography and in-text citations in the Chicago Manual of Style Citation Guide, available online from OSU Libraries.

Google:

Google Scholar. Search Google Scholar for books and online articles.

Google Book Search. Search for books by entering a keyword or phrase. Clicking on a book title provides some basic information about the book, and potentially a few snippets (i.e., a few sentences containing your keyword or phrase in context) or full pages, or the entire book, if it is out of copyright. A search can also be conducted within the original search to further refine the search. Explore the website for further features.

Google Video. Search for videos and video excerpts.

OSU Office of Responsible Research Practices (ORRP). The Institutional Review Board (IRB), administered under the ORRP, oversees research activities at OSU, including research involving Human Subjects. "All research activities involving human subjects must be reviewed and approved by an IRB unless the Office of Responsible Research Practices prospectively determines that the research falls into a category of exemption established by federal regulation." In addition, all investigators and key personnel who participate in the design, conduct, or reporting of human subjects research (including exempt research) must be appropriately trained in the protection of human subjects. (See Collaborative Institutional Training Initiative (CITI) web-based human research courses to satisfy this requirement for OSU researchers.) The ORRP holds regular workshops for faculty and graduate students, including those aimed specifically at students.

OSU Undergraduate Research Office. Information sessions on opportunities for undergraduate students to engage in research, regularly scheduled IRB Staff Assistance for Student Researchers, etc.

OSU College of Arts and Sciences. Information on undergraduate / graduate student funding opportunities, faculty, departments and units in the College, etc.
OSU Institute for Chinese Studies (ICS). The ICS is "a center for scholarly research, student training, and public programming about the Chinese-speaking world for OSU faculty, students, the P-12 community, business and government, and members of the general public."

OSU East Asian Studies Center (EASC). The Title VI NRC/FLAS East Asian Studies Center (EASC) at The Ohio State University's mission is "the broad dissemination of basic knowledge and advanced research on the cultures, languages, history, politics, and economies of East Asia."
