In the SMART Lab, we look at changes in your heart rate over time to identify stress. As you can see below, your heart rate fluctuates naturally but does so more erratically when you are stressed. Through relaxation training and practicing mindfulness, you can train yourself to be more relaxed and decrease overall stress level.