Hotspotting: The Driver Behind the Camden Coalition’s Innovations

GUEST AUTHOR: Aaron Trushi, Associate Director for Data, Research & Evaluation, Camden Coalition of Healthcare Providers

September 23, 2014

The Camden Coalition of Healthcare Providers (CCHP) works to improve the health of Camden, New Jersey residents through innovative approaches to increase quality, capacity, and accessibility within the city’s health care system. At the core of CCHP’s work is the concept of “hotspotting,” a data-driven process for timely identification of extreme patterns of health care use. Hotspotting is paired with targeted interventions and follow-up to better address patient needs, reshape ineffective utilization patterns, and reduce costs.

CCHP’s hotspotting method has evolved over the organization’s 13-year history. In its earliest forms, CCHP collected and merged claims
